Our Mission:
To prepare students to attain academic, personal, and professional excellence in a multicultural and global society.
Achieving an education is becoming increasingly important as the global and national economies continue to right themselves and employers seek talented and educated candidates to move their organizations into the future with confidence. Despite the economic downturns in the last two years, Bloomfield College is fully committed to enrolling qualified students, supporting their dreams of continuing their education through programs such as McNair and LSAMP, and providing programs designed to support students who are motivated to learn including those who may need a little extra help. We are fully aware of the difficulties this economy has had on some of our students and their families and have been able to meet the needs of our deserving students through scholarships.

We continue to bring academically rich and rigorous programs on campus to challenge our students. The Honors Program is one such initiative in which students who maintain a high GPA are able to avail themselves of programs and events that introduce them to other students with similar interests who excel at the college. The Math Pilot program, designed to bring incoming students up to speed for college-level math, has become nationally recognized as a model for other colleges and universities. These are just two examples of the ways the college works to educate and enrich the lives of all our students.

In this issue of the On the Green, we have adapted the Honor Roll of Donors to include academic, athletic, and statistical information about the 2009-2010 fiscal year. You can read about the programs and initiatives that were either added or enhanced through gifts from individuals, corporations, and foundations, and government-sponsored higher education grants.

Our history has consistently been one of progress and we have stayed true to our mission. Bloomfield College opened its doors 142 years ago to first-generation students who were to become pastors to a growing German population of Presbyterians. We continue to offer a well-rounded education to our students, and they are making their mark on the world. You can read about Craig Lindsay ’76 who is now living and working in Hong Kong, and senior student Donna LaTorre who came to Bloomfield College after serving as a medic in the United States Army with plans to return to military service armed with a Bachelor of Science in Nursing.

The college welcomes three new trustees: Vernon Endo, Patricia Etzold, and Carolyn Glynn ’69. They bring many skills, talents, and much enthusiasm to the Board. Their bios are in the Board Room section of this magazine and I am sure you will enjoy getting to know them.

The Bloomfield College Alumni Association is planning a Reunion and Gala in the spring. Mark your calendars for Saturday, May 7, 2011. I hope to see you on campus that day.

Very best wishes,

Richard Levao, President
Craig Lindsay ’76, by his own account, was an average student. He chose Bloomfield College back in 1972 for several reasons, among them, it was close to home and it had a good reputation. Besides, he had friends attending the college, so it would not be as ominous as a freshman to step onto the campus.

He was a full-time business/accounting major with a part-time job in a butcher shop. “This was the time that we paid for college and tried to avoid student loans,” he said. It was a simpler time of getting an education and preparing oneself for the world. His only other activity on campus was as a member of the infamous Austin Animals, the campus commuter club. “I had to work to pay the tuition, so there wasn’t much time for other activities,” he explained. “But I don’t feel that I missed anything.”

Memories of Bloomfield College included the controversy of using the latest technology – calculators – in the classroom. “The prevailing thought was that we should be able to do the equations without help from technology,” he recalls. There was a good argument for that theory in that the methods of calculations do need to be understood. “What happens if the batteries die in your calculator?” he says. Professor Albert Tomlinson was his inspiration and helped him to choose accounting as a focus. “He was a tough professor, but he made sure that his students understood the concepts. Craig Lindsay ’76 at the Great Wall of China. Scaling new heights both professionally and personally, he is always on the lookout for the next opportunity.
He was always available for help and he encouraged me to major in accounting,” Lindsay says.

In the early 1980s, Lindsay had the good fortune to be offered a proprietary accounting analyst role with Goldman Sachs. During his 16 years with the firm, he spent six of them in Europe (London, Frankfurt, and Zurich) with Goldman Sachs finance and operations divisions and more than four of them in the Goldman Sachs Tokyo office. In 1996 he was offered the opportunity to join a start up internal proprietary trading operation of a major Japanese bank – Tokai Asia Limited – as the chief financial officer, based in Hong Kong. In 2004 Lindsay helped start up a Pan Asian Hedge Fund and in 2007 had the opportunity to join a very well-respected local fund manager, Mr. James Wang, in setting up a new venture, China Alpha Investment Management Limited, in which Lindsay serves as managing director and chief operating officer. A joint venture was created with the largest securities firm in China, CITIC Securities International Investment Management (HK) Limited, and in the past three-plus years grew from five to 30 people in two offices and they currently manage around $500 million (USD). “This was not part of the grand plan,” he says. “But when opportunities arose, I grabbed them – they seemed to fit just right with what I enjoyed doing.” In between all of those travels and professional experience, Lindsay returned to Rutgers University for an MBA in Finance.

Lindsay is a sixteen-year resident of Hong Kong, where he lives with his wife Mie and Alys, his seven-year old daughter. Inue, the Golden Retriever whose name means dog in Japanese. Mie is a full-time mom and popular freelance journalist who writes for several Japanese publications. In addition to his career and family, Lindsay gives back to his community through volunteering. He is a past president of the American Club in Hong Kong, is nearing retirement of his position as executive committee and board member with the Hong Kong Securities Institute, and is the honorary treasurer for St. John’s Cathedral where he also serves on the finance committee.

While his career has taken him to the other side of the globe, he remains faithful to the place that gave him his start. “It’s right to give back; this is how I was raised,” he says. A strong supporter of Bloomfield College through time, talent, and treasure, Lindsay has been back to campus to talk with students who are interested in business and finance. Speaking to students last spring in the library, he talked about the need to make oneself marketable to stand above the competition. He encouraged them to continue their education, especially in the world of business, and learn a second or third language. “Business is global and the need to communicate in another language is becoming more and more necessary. For example, China is an emerging marketplace, so learning to speak Mandarin would be a good addition to one’s résumé,” he offered.

Concerning advice to students, this global businessman says, “Develop a unique skill set and don’t be afraid to start small or to take risks with smaller companies. Entry level jobs may not be in abundance in the U.S. so you may have to travel to another country to get experience. Most of all, work harder than anyone else in your company, be very flexible to your employers needs, and always keep looking for the next opportunity.”
Carolyn R. Glynn has spent her career rising through the ranks at Hoffmann-LaRoche Inc. located in Nutley, NJ. She began as a guest services representative and worked her way through the public relations department as a specialist, manager, assistant director and director. She then moved up into the public policy and communications arena and in January of 2001 became the vice president, public affairs and member of the North American Executive Committee where she held this position until her retirement in July 2009.

Among the professional organizations in which Glynn was an active member are: The Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA), Public Affairs Section (chair, Alliance Committee; member, Advertising Steering Committee; chair, FDA Issues Committee; chair, Communications Seminar; member, Steering Committee; board member liaison to the Board Steering Committee on Emergency Preparedness; vice chair, and chair); HealthCare Institute of New Jersey (founding member, Steering Committee; chair, Steering Committee; trustee), New Jersey Health Products Council (executive board member, chair-elect, chair), Executive Women of New Jersey, Public Affairs Council, Institute for Public Relations Research and Education, National Council on Patient Information and Education, and National Pharmaceutical Council, Public Affairs Committee. She was also a member of the Issues Management Association, American Medical Writers Association, International Association of Business Communicators, Women in Communications and the New Jersey Press Association.

Glynn has been honored with several professional awards. In 1984, she received a Tribute to Women and Industry award and she was given the 1993 Woman of the Year award by the Healthcare Businesswomen’s Association. The Executive Women of New Jersey gave her the 2004 Salute to the Policy Makers Award and she received the 2006 Woman of Influence in Communications award from the Women’s Fund of New Jersey.

A 1969 graduate of Bloomfield College, Glynn was one of the students selected for the World Campus Afloat program in 1967-68 Semester at Sea. She served as vice president in the former Bloomfield College Alumni Federation (now the Bloomfield College Alumni Association) and lent her talents to the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, the New Jersey Advisory Committee of Thirteen (PBS), Clara Maass Memorial Hospital, ARC of Essex County, Recording for the Blind and Dyslexic and the First Presbyterian Church at Caldwell.

Endo served as managing director of FGIC (Financial Guaranty Insurance Company) from 1988 to 1991 and was responsible for the mortgage finance unit. He was a member of the financial institutions group at Prudential Securities.

He moved to the position of managing director and member of corporate leadership team at FGIC from 1991 to 2001. He was responsible for various business segments including structured finance, bond insurance underwriting (including public finance and international), capital markets and new products at FGIC. He served as a director of FGIC from 1991 to 2001.
In 2003, Endo co-founded GFGC LLC and also served as its chief executive officer. Endo served as a director, president, and chief executive officer of Ram Holdings Ltd. and its subsidiary, Ram Reinsurance Company Ltd. (RAM Re) until May 14, 2010.

A graduate of Williams College, Endo holds a B.A. in Political Science. He resides in Montclair, NJ.

Institute for Technology and Professional Studies (ITPS)

ITPS offers certificate programs for upgrading job skills or changing careers. January 2011 marks the start of several new programs in ITPS including:

- Developing iPhone and iPad applications with Flash/CS5,
- Introduction to JavaScript, and
- Health Insurance Specialist program, with classes in Managed Care, Health Care Management, Health Informatics, and Health Insurance Marketing.

For more information, visit www.itps.bloomfield.edu, or call 973-748-9000 X 117.

Center for Adult Learning (CAL)

The Center for Adult Learning (CAL) serves the unique educational needs of adult students. The new programs are:

- Accelerated Bachelor of Science in Nursing. A new cohort will begin in March 2011 and September 2011. This program will allow completion of a BSN in 15-18 months with once-a-week classes.

- Health Informatics contains technology, best practices, methodology and policy across healthcare delivery systems in the areas of clinical, medical, nursing, and biomedical informatics. Students will have the academic knowledge required to pass the Certified Professional in Healthcare Information and Management Systems certification. A new cohort starts in March 2011.

For more information, contact Dr. John Mwaura, director of CAL, at (973)-748-9000 X 453.

How important is your credit score?

College students are learning the importance of developing and maintaining a good credit score. At a finance seminar for students held in the Deacons Den on Friday, October 8, students learned just how important that score is and steps to take to create and keep good credit. The seminar was developed by sophomore student and resident advisor Ashley Taylor and was presented by Carmine Corino, an independent financial planner and member of the Bloomfield College advisory board for the ITPS Certified Financial Planning certificate program, and Samantha Benson from the New Jersey Higher Education Student Assistance Authority (HESAA). They spoke to the students about how to develop a credit rating, such as opening a debit card account and keeping it solvent and applying for a major credit card and paying off the balance every month.

Benson talked about student loans and opportunities through the state of New Jersey for financial assistance. She also spoke about how to prevent identity theft when applying for credit cards. Corino spoke about the impact of credit scores on personal and professional lives. He told them that a good credit score will allow them to make large purchases such as a car or house and may help them in job searches because employers will often check credit scores of prospective employees.

This seminar earned T.R.U.E. points for all who attended.

Korean Food Festival

The Institute for Technology and Professional Studies (ITPS) Korean internship students hosted the first international food festival with the students offering traditional dishes they cooked themselves. The fare included gim bap, grilled marinated beef, kimchi, and san jeok, all of which was eagerly tasted by the Bloomfield College community.

In addition to the wonderful fare, the students set up tables with information about their culture and one talented young lady was transcribing peoples’ names from English to Korean in calligraphy.

“This is the first of what we hope will become an annual event,” explained Vice President for ITPS Peter Jeong. “We hope to do this again next year with either a Latino or Romanian theme. An event like this brings people together to understand different cultures.”

As the dining portion of the event wound down, the Korean students plugged an iPod into the speakers and soon a crowd of young people gathered to dance.

The Korean internship program brings nursing and healthcare students from colleges and universities in Korea to the Bloomfield College campus for immersion English studies and shadowing medical professionals in area hospitals. Similar programs are offered to students from Romania, many of whom study IT.

Students find music to be the international language as the dancing began.

Poets converge to share thoughts

In the heart of Newark, in the spirit of poetry, students, teachers, writers, readers, listeners, musicians, and story-tellers from around the world gathered together for the 13th Biennial Geraldine R. Dodge Poetry Festival. The day was full of poetry readings, interviews, life-lectures, book signings, live music, and story-telling. For lovers of writing and writers themselves, the festival was fun, entertaining, educational, and inspirational.

On Friday October 8, 2010, the Division of Humanities of Bloomfield College took a group of 100 students and five faculty members to the poetry festival through the generosity of the Elizabeth C. and Archibald M. Palmer Endowed and Annual Co-Curricular Innovation Grant Fund. Included in the Bloomfield College troop were professors and published poets, Paul Genega and Rachel E. Griffiths. Students of the division and student guests were openly invited, though particular classes such as Professor Griffiths’ Advanced Poetry Seminar were required to attend and write a recap of their experiences.

The students experienced readings by celebrated poets Amiri Baraka, Joseph Millar, Marie Ponsot Billy Collins, Rita Dove, and Sharon Olds and many others. The poets brought their own unique styles and writings to the stage. Baraka, formally the Poet Laureate of New Jersey, is now the Poet Laureate of Newark Public Schools.

The open readings session was occupied primarily by amateur poets of all ages and from all over the world. In the speaking room of the New Jersey Historical Society, experienced performers and not-so-experienced readers covered the air with their words. Some poems were from published books, while others were lines sketched on loose-leaf pages seconds before they were read aloud. All poets were commended with claps or customary snaps for their presence at the podium. According to the festival director and foundation president Chris Daggett, the focus of the Dodge Poetry Festival is to “make a space for poetry. This opportunity for students, teachers, writers, readers, and listeners to gather as brethren of the craft set an endorsing example of the Geraldine R. Dodge foundation goal: to establish a society more human – a world more livable.” In that place for that time, we were all one people; we were all fans of poetry.

Living from the Land – One woman’s dream puts communities to work

A TLC presentation, co-sponsored by the business division, featured Dr. Vianna Muller, anthropologist and entrepreneur, during the second of the series called Center for Alternative Visions. Held in the Shelby Room of the Library, Dr. Muller was introduced by Professor Rashmi Jaipal. The presentation was attended by college faculty and staff members.

Dr. Muller is the co-founder of World Wide Botanicals, a company that distributes medicinal plants harvested in Peru. She spoke about the rewards and challenges of developing a for-profit company that works for environmental sustainability, free trade, and social justice.

She spoke at length about the business model of finding the herbs, preserving their growing space in the tropical rainforests of South America, and helping to develop the impoverished communities through sustainable and environmentally friendly methods.

From the aspect of starting and maintaining a business, Dr. Muller spoke about the challenges of growing a business within a global business world while staying true to the mission of protecting the native habitats and communities. She talked about the partnerships that she developed with NGOs in Peru and working with the indigenous communities to not only develop methods of growing and harvesting using organic techniques, but also how to use the natural resources to live day to day. An example, Dr. Muller illustrated how solar ovens could be used for cooking, which offered viable alternatives to trying to find fuel in a harsh environment. She also spoke of the methods used to promote entrepreneurship among the communities through loans and training.

Her company has helped several remote communities improve their own living conditions through small business development. The emphasis however, was to create environmentally sustainable growing scenarios to allow the small businesses to flourish over the long term.
Community service highlighted

On Wednesday, October 20, 2010, Bloomfield College held a Community Service Partnership Recognition Breakfast in the Shelby Art Room of the College Library. The breakfast was hosted by the Office of Student Affairs to recognize community service activities throughout the campus. The college community welcomed guests Ray Shepard, CEO of the American Red Cross; John Hughes, chairman of the Knights of Columbus; and David Lehman, PBA representative and Bloomfield Township police officer. The program highlighted two community service fundraising campaigns: The Help & Hope for Haiti and the Knights of Columbus Wounded Veterans Tank Pull event.

Student Government President Tashon Jackson presented Mr. Shepard with a check of $3,300 towards the Haiti Assistance Program from the College’s efforts called Help & Hope for Haiti. This fundraiser began collecting donations in February 2010, following the earthquake disaster in Port-au-Prince. The College plans to send a volunteer group of student leaders and faculty to Haiti during spring break 2011 to volunteer their services rebuilding Haiti.

Also recognized at the breakfast was the Tank Pull for Wounded Veterans Fund sponsored by the Knights of Columbus. Mitchell McDonald, a high school senior at Livingston High School with sophomore status at Bloomfield College, helped organize this fundraiser which included participants from Bloomfield College and the Bloomfield Police Department. Team Bloomfield College raised $5,125. Also recognized at the breakfast on behalf of the Bloomfield PBA was patrolman David Lehman. Both groups were recognized by John Hughes, chairman for the Tank Pull, for their participation. Ray Sheppard acknowledged Bloomfield College for its fundraising efforts for the Help & Hope for Haiti. The event ended with a quote attributed to Mother Teresa, “If I didn’t pick up that one person, I wouldn’t have picked up forty-two thousand. The same thing goes for you, the same thing for your family, the same thing for your church, your community. Just begin – one, one, one.”

Bloomfield College was acknowledged for its fundraising efforts for the Help & Hope for Haiti.
WHAT’S NEW AT BC

Frances M. McLaughlin Division of Nursing receives accreditation

The Frances M. McLaughlin Division of Nursing at Bloomfield College received word from the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE) that it has been granted a full, ten-year accreditation with no concerns or recommendations. The announcement was made to the College’s faculty and staff by Dr. Neddie Serra, chair of the nursing division and author of the accreditation process.

Officially recognized by the U.S. Secretary of Education as a national accreditation agency, the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education is an autonomous accrediting agency, contributing to the improvement of the public’s health. CCNE ensures the quality and integrity of baccalaureate, graduate, and residency programs in nursing. CCNE serves the public interest by assessing and identifying programs that engage in effective educational practices.

The nursing division currently has a 96 percent pass rate average for nursing graduates who take the state’s NCLEX exams.

The Frances M. McLaughlin Division of Nursing at Bloomfield College was renamed for its founding chair in 2008. The division is over 40 years old and one of the first schools in the state to offer a bachelor’s degree in nursing (BSN) and a transition program from RN diploma to a baccalaureate degree.

College receives third PBI grant

Bloomfield College was notified through the offices of Senators Robert Menendez (D-NJ) and Frank Lautenberg (D-NJ) that it has been selected to receive $250,000 in grant funding under the Predominately Black Institutions (PBI) Program.

The basic intent of the program is to provide students with the literacy skills to access and evaluate information. These skills will help them to pursue scholarly and personal interests and to contribute to their learning community and society as a whole. The multi-phase program will include the formation of an Information Literacy Network that will contain reading, writing, oral and image-based communication skills, critical thinking, creative expression, technological competence, financial literacy and multicultural and global literacy. Done in steps, each of the competencies will be incorporated into the general education program and the specific majors offered by the college. Long-range goals of this funding include adding a state-of-the-art learning commons center to the current library building. This will be a multi-functional area for teaching information literacy.

The College is seeking to increase retention and graduation rates of students by giving them access to contemporary technology tools and immersing them in a culture of scholarship. The Information Literacy Network will be a program in which students can acquire the information literacy skills necessary for their persistence to graduation and full participation in careers.

Previous PBI funding awarded to Bloomfield College has been used for student research in the sciences on campus, global research opportunities, upgrading the science and nursing labs, programs promoting math skills-building and male mentoring in education, and a newly renovated building dedicated to the education division.
Debora LaTorre’s combined enthusiasm for the military and nursing is contagious. A former Army medic, current nursing student and hopefully a future Army officer in the nurse corps, Debora has a clear path planned out with her career as a nurse as the focal point.

“I joined the Army right out of high school,” says Debora. “My dad was all for it, but it took two weeks for my mom to sign the papers, which she had to do because I was only 17. I told her that I was joining with or without her permission and she finally relented. I have wanted to join the military since I was young.” Knowing that the Army would eventually pay for college, she enlisted as a combat medic (now called a health care specialist) and went through 11 weeks of training to get her national EMT certification. “I pulled a plum assignment; I was stationed in Hawaii,” she recalls. Originally she had planned to become a pediatrician, but her deployment to Afghanistan changed her mind. During a rotation at a combat support hospital in Bagram, she worked with combat detainees and civilians from outside the wire (off base). “We had a little nine-year-old girl who was burned over 25 percent of her body due to an oil heater that exploded. I assisted the nurse with debridging her burns. The doctor had given orders and the nurse and I were with her during the treatment. As I watched the nurse console the child, my life changed and I realized that I wanted to be the compassionate caregiver, to stay with the patient and advocate for her. So I decided to change my

OF DONORS
The 2009-2010 Honor Roll of Donors contains an overview of a number of programs, services and opportunities that were so generously supported by many of our alumni and friends. Through this report, you will learn about the impact your gift makes on the advancement of our college.

We also have established the 1868 Legacy Society which recognizes individuals who have chosen to make a deferred gift to Bloomfield College through their estate plans. For example, some members of the Society have named Bloomfield College in their will while others have opted for designating the College as the beneficiary of a life insurance policy or retirement plan. There are other types of deferred gifts such as charitable gift annuities or trusts which make payments back to you for life. Please contact me if you have any questions about these or other deferred gift opportunities.

If you have yet to visit our website, I encourage you to keep in touch through www.bccommunity.org. On this site, you can create your profile, connect with friends and keep up-to-date with the latest happenings on campus. You can also make your gift through this secure website and check to see if your company participates in a matching gift program.

On behalf of Bloomfield College, I want to thank all of our generous donors who, through their gifts, made the 2009-2010 a record-breaking year.

Kwi Brennan
Vice President for Institutional Advancement

Financial Highlights

In the 2009-2010 fundraising year, 900 generous donors gave $2,678,753. More than 66 percent of the donors were alumni while corporations, foundations and organizations made up the majority of dollars given.

The Giving Source chart illustrates who gave to the college and the Giving Designation chart shows how the gifts were used. Please note that neither chart includes government funding, such as the PBI grant used in academic programming, Title IV funding used for programs such as SSS-STARS and SAGE, or the McNair or LSAMP funds for supporting students’ achieving admission to graduate schools.

The Bestfoods Educational Foundation gave a $1.5 million gift to establish an endowed scholarship fund. In BLOOMFIELD COLLEGE has a long tradition of educating many different types of students: first-generation, students with financial needs, students who are motivated to attend college, students who want to excel in any one of several excellent programs on campus, and students seeking a global experience. The College continues to move forward with higher education initiatives that are all encompassing, facing the challenges of a global economy, incorporating ever changing technology and increasing the skills and knowledge needed for successful careers.

The College’s tag line talks about the institution as being open, transformative, innovative, and rigorous.

Admission and Enrollment Management
The year 2009-2010 saw an increase in enrollment over the previous year. The total enrollment for 2008-2009 was 2029; the total enrollment for 2009-2010 was 2156. While enrollment across gender and ethnicity remained about the same, the total number of students entering Bloomfield College did increase.

TRANSFORMATIVE

Class of 2010
The graduating class of 2010 had students that represented more than 45 countries around the globe.

169 students received their bachelor of arts degree; 110 students received their bachelor of science degree for a total of 279 graduates. Nineteen students graduated cum laude, seven graduated magna cum laude, and seven graduated summa cum laude.

Student Support Services
Support for Achievement in Graduate Education (SAGE) consists of support for students to attend graduate school, law school, and business school and to assist students in passing the PRAXIS teaching/licensing exam. Originally funded by federal Title III, the program was institutionalized by the College. Currently, there are 28 students preparing for graduate, law, or business school and 50 students preparing for the PRAXIS exam.

Student Support Services-STAR Program is a federally funded (US Department of Education) program which supports legislatively eligible students to earn a bachelor’s degree. Services include academic support activities, personal counseling, tutoring and academic counseling. The goals of the program address graduation, persistence, and good academic standing. The program is funded to serve 160 students from freshmen through graduating seniors. After a decade of federal funding, SSS STARS was again funded for $255,505 per year for five years for a total of $1,277,525 beginning September 1, 2010. 32 students graduated from the SSS-STAR Program in 2010 for a six-year graduation rate of 79 percent.

HONOR ROLL OF DONORS 2009-2010

76 percent of dollars given were used to support scholarships which are crucial to the lives of deserving students at Bloomfield College. For many, it makes a difference in whether or not they can continue their studies – especially for juniors and seniors.

Restricted gifts are donor designated and support specific areas of the college such as the library, honors program, and academic divisions. Gifts to the Bloomfield College Fund are unrestricted and used throughout the college community to support priorities such as campus beautification projects, academic programming, and student-life initiatives.

Should you have any questions, please contact the Office of Institutional Advancement at advancement@bloomfield.edu or 973-748-9000 x293.
The Kellman Program in the Humanities
This program is designed to give adult students an opportunity to experience college-level work through the study of the humanities. The nine-month long scholarship program is offered to those adults, often low-income, that may have had to interrupt their education or not had the means to attend college. The students study art history, philosophy, creative writing, and literature and are able to apply three college credits to their admission to Bloomfield College upon their successful completion of the course. The 2009-2010 Kellman Scholars program graduated 11 students.

Total Resident Undergraduate Education (T.R.U.E.)
This program is a model to bring elements of the classroom into residence life. Resident Advisors (RAs) work with the staff to bring innovative and interesting co-curricular programming to resident students throughout the year. The emphasis of the programming is to expand upon skills and learning with critical thinking and problem solving skills, communication skills, multicultural and multiracial awareness, citizenship, professional skills, scientific and technological skills, and aesthetic appreciation. All resident students are required to attend these programs to earn T.R.U.E. points.

The attendance for T.R.U.E. programs for the fall semester 2009 were:
- Residents: 1469, Commuters: 27
The attendance for T.R.U.E. programs for the spring semester 2010 were:
- Residents: 1004, Commuters: 93
Total T.R.U.E. programs for 2009-2010: 130

Global Education through the PBI Grant
Through the Predominantly Black Institutions (PBI) grant, 13 students went to the Bahamas for a hands-on research opportunity in marine biology, and two students accompanied Dr. Amy Eguchi to Singapore to the RoboCup International competition to serve as judges for RoboCup competitors from around the world.

Math Pilot Program
The math pilot program is a developmental program designed to bring students lacking math skills to the college level math program within the first year. The seven-week intensive classes proved successful with an 82 percent pass rate, which represents a 19 percent higher pass rate than the traditional academic foundations classes. The program, created by faculty, attracted the attention of the Institute for High Education Policy/Walmart Foundation, which has provided funding. The program has also been requested by colleges and universities nationwide to be used as a model.

Community Service
During academic year 2009-2010, Bloomfield College students engaged in over 40 different community service activities with over 20 external organizations. Nearly 800 students participated in community service/outreach activities for the year. They worked directly with several organizations including Make-a-Wish Foundation, Ronald McDonald House, Cerebral Palsy, Salvation Army of Newark, American Red Cross of Fairfield, Embrace Kids Foundation, Veterans Center of Bloomfield, Knights of Columbus, Toys for Life, and Help & Hope for Haiti.

INNOVATIVE
Institute for Technology and Professional Studies
The Institute for Technology and Professional Studies (ITPS) offers programs to both domestic and global students in job skills training and certification, English as a Second Language (ESL), nursing and IT internships for global-partnership students, and professional development.

Bloomfield College has established partnerships with 94 universities and colleges in more than 20 countries and serves approximately 580 students annually in global initiatives. The total number of students that annually go through the ITPS programs in both the domestic and global programs is approximately 1600.

In 2009, ITPS was asked by the South Korean government to implement a program to teach Korean teachers to teach in English. The TICKET (Total Immersion Course for Korean English Teachers) program had an initial 23 teachers from Busan, Korea who experienced total-immersion English, learned pedagogical methods used in the US and interned in nine New Jersey schools as teachers.

Forty-three high school students from Italy spent several weeks on campus during the summer to learn English (including idiomatic language as well as reading, writing, and speaking), and explore the cultural environs of Bloomfield and New York City.

The nursing internship program had nursing students from several colleges in Korea experience American health care systems with combined classroom (English and health care) and on-site learning in several area hospitals.

Master Degree in Accounting
The master’s degree in accounting program was approved by the NJ State Commission of Higher Education and the first class began in January 2010.

Center for Adult Learning
The Center for Adult Learning developed a program in partnership with the East Orange Child Development Center offering on-site courses to their employees in early childhood education. These course credits can be applied to a degree at Bloomfield College.

Collaborative Agreements
The College signed an articulation agreement with Passaic County Community College for the new accelerated RN/BSN program. This includes the use of PCCC’s facilities, a faculty exchange, and a student exchange. The accelerated RN/BSN program was approved by the faculty and targets adult students.

RIGOROUS

McNair Program
The Ronald E. McNair Post-Baccalaureate Achievement Program is a federally funded (US ED) program which supports legislatively eligible students in their acceptance to and enrollment in graduate school, particularly PhD programs. Services include academic support activities which address success in graduating, preparing for the Graduate Record Exam (GRE), applying to, being accepted to and enrolling in graduate school, conducting scholarly research and activities, and building academic networks. The program is funded to serve 25 junior and senior students.

- The goals of the program address completing of research and scholarly activities that directly impact educational progression, earning a baccalaureate degree within three years of joining the program; enrolling in a post-baccalaureate degree program immediately following graduation; and earning a doctoral degree within ten years of baccalaureate graduation.
- McNair is funded for $220,000 per year for four years starting October 1, 2009. Bloomfield College can apply for renewal after the initial period expires.
- In 2009-2010, all students completed either research or scholarly activities; all seniors graduated from the College in Spring 2010, 83 percent of the seniors enrolled in a post-baccalaureate degree program immediately after graduation.

LSAMP
The Garden State Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation (LSAMP) is a federally funded program to support legislatively eligible students in earning a bachelor’s degree in the majors of science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM). Bloomfield College is one of nine participating institutions in New Jersey, which also includes Montclair State University, William Paterson University, NJ City University, Essex County College, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Kean University, Rutgers Newark, and Rutgers New Brunswick.
• LSAMP is funded for $53,560 per year for five years starting in July 1, 2009, to serve at least 30 students in the STEM majors. The alliance can request renewal at the end of the funding cycle.

• LSAMP scholars each have a faculty mentor and a peer mentor. Two students worked on chemistry research projects. Six students participated in the LSAMP Northern cluster alliance conference at Montclair State University and two students participated in the first annual LSAMP Conference at Rutgers-Newark.

Honors Program
The Honors Program was launched with 26 students representing six of the seven academic divisions. Three students attended national and regional Honors Council conferences and met with honors students from other institutions.

Three students participated in the Fed Challenge in the spring of 2010.

Frances M. McLaughlin Division of Nursing
The average number of nursing graduates who have taken and passed their NCLEX boards for the past three years is 98 percent.

This is the year that the Presbyterian Division of Nursing at Bloomfield College was renamed in honor of its founding chair, Francis M. McLaughlin N’45, H’90.

Athletics
Sixteen Bloomfield College scholar-athletes earned CACC All-Academic Team honors: five in the spring sports (baseball, tennis, softball); two in the winter sports (women’s basketball, basketball); nine in the fall sports (men’s and women’s soccer, cross country). Sixteen Deacons earned ADA Academic Achievement Awards.

Gage Daye was named CACC Player of the Year, was Daktronics second team All-American and first team All-East Region, All-met division II player of the year, finished second in the nation for points per game (26.0), and recorded the highest single game-point total in the region.

Four scholar-athletes made the All-CACC second teams; three athletes made the All-CACC first teams.

Three scholar-athletes were named to the North Jersey High School All-Decade Team by the Bergen Record.

Three Bloomfield College scholar-athletes represented the United States of America in another part of the world as part of USA Athletes International (USAAI):

• Women’s basketball players Vanessa Lamison, Tiffany McDaniel, and head coach Jerry Wimberly traveled to Spain to take part in games and tour the country over the summer.

• Men’s basketball player Robert Young traveled to Barbados as part of USAAI, and participated in games and toured the country as a representative of American basketball.

Psychology majors presented their research at a capstone event. Each student was required to complete a body of research and present it to the college community.
direction and become a nurse." During her 46-week rotation, she had several close calls while outside of the wire including treating a buddy who lost his foot to an IED explosion.

Nursing called to her and upon her discharge from the Army, she began to investigate colleges with a BSN program close to her home in Kearny. She chose Bloomfield College over other area programs because of the small class sizes and the personal relationships between students and professors. “I took a chemistry class with Dr. Vogt and loved it!” she exclaims. “The professors not only know who I am, but they take a personal interest in my life outside of the college,” Debora explains. “They know I had a young daughter and never pass up the opportunity to ask me about her.”

The transition from military to civilian life was not without its challenges. “In the Army you do as you are told by your superiors but as a nursing student at Bloomfield, I am an advocate for the patient and required to use critical thinking in my learning,” she explains. “Now I am finding out why we employed certain methods in the field.” Discovering that her education at Bloomfield College is comprehensive, she has decided that she wants to return to the Army as an officer in the Army Nurses Corps. “I will have the advantage of knowing both sides of the profession, not just taking orders, but now knowing why I would need to give them.”

The hardest thing she has had to learn as a student is to allow a patient to die. “My whole career has been about saving lives and the alternative was unacceptable to me at first,” she says. “As a patient advocate, I have had to respect the wishes of a patient, such as honoring a DNR (Do Not Resuscitate) order. This was difficult, but the nursing program stresses patient advocacy and I have learned to let go.”

The Army is paying for her education through the 9/11 GI Bill and she is a Yellow Ribbon recipient at Bloomfield College. “If I am accepted into the Army Nurses Corps, they will pay for my master’s degree,” she explains. “I would love to come back to Bloomfield College after my Army career to teach!” Currently, she is mentoring sophomore students by helping with class work and practicums. “While we have specific mentoring hours, we are available to the younger students at any time,” she says. “This is a model that our professors have given to us, the sense that we are important as individuals.”

“The clinical staff here is outstanding,” Debora says. “I am so blest to have found Bloomfield College.”

From Combat to Classroom: BC welcomes veterans

The new GI Bill, instituted after 9/11, gives military veterans the opportunity to start or continue their college educations. Veterans are finding access to education at Bloomfield College with a rigorous program designed to attract those who have served this country and returning as adult students. As a participant in the Yellow Ribbon program, Bloomfield College helps to offset the tuition cost difference between state and independent colleges.

As veterans, these students undergo an assessment of prior learning, taking into account previously earned college credits, transcripts from courses offered by the military during their service, and College Level Examination Program (CLEP), and the Prior Learning Assessment (PLA). Once a student/veteran completes eight courses, these assessments are reviewed for additional college credits.

For injured or disabled veterans, 100 percent of their college education is funded through federal veterans programs. Bloomfield College has a working relationship with the veterans’ center, located in Bloomfield, which offers additional resources to all veterans.

“Veterans bring so much to our college community,” says Jorge Fernandez, adult admission coordinator. “They come with a sense of respect, commitment, and responsibility that they have developed in the military. They are dynamic students and we are looking to expand our reach to include more veterans as they move from military service to civilian life.”

Any questions about the Yellow Ribbon program or veteran enrollment should be addressed to the Office of Admission and Enrollment Management at 973-748-9000 x230, or by emailing admission@bloomfield.edu.
In a combined event, PSEG Foundation presented Bloomfield College with a check for $25,000 for the PSEG Foundation Endowed Honors Scholarship Fund that will be awarded to deserving sophomore, junior, and senior students. Immediately following was the inauguration of the Honors Program Speakers Series.

President Richard Levao opened the program with remarks about the newly revived Honors Program. “The Honors Program exists to light the flame, to stimulate the love of learning, especially among our brightest and best; to challenge them to reach higher and continue their desire to study,” he told the audience of faculty, staff, board members, and honors program students. In introducing Vaughn McKoy, president of the PSEG Foundation, he said, “Your presence here today is a tribute to your belief in our mission and purpose. The generosity of the PSEG Foundation will give many of our best students the support they need to continue to study and succeed.” Mr. McKoy responded with the fact that the Foundation’s support of students through scholarships is good for all stakeholders as students graduate and move into successful careers.

The Bloomfield College Honors Program was re-established in 2008 after a ten-year lapse. Within the first year, 24 students enrolled in the program and to date that number has risen to 30. The program seeks to give students exposure to honors students from other colleges and universities, enhanced programming, and events such as this speakers series funded through private individual gifts.

The first speaker to grace this series was Diana Drysdale, vice president, Renewables, for PSEG Holdings and a member of the Bloomfield College Board of Trustees. Her compelling story of an impoverished childhood, her drive to succeed, and her journey through a male-dominated industry as an engineer was marked with humor and inspiration. She spoke of being number seven in a household of ten children in a small, home in northern Canada with no running water. But she was challenged by her parents who recognized her abilities and she had a strong desire to seek out new worlds. She gave the audience her tool box of skills that she uses to guide her life. The first is to seek knowledge, build skills, and learn from those around you. “You have two ears and one mouth,” she offered. “Use them proportionally.”

The second tool is to face challenges and make plans to work around them. “My mother used to tell me two things,” she said. “This too shall pass’ and ‘If it doesn’t kill you it will make you stronger.’” She said to envision getting past the challenge and seek goals.

Next was not to make excuses. “Making excuses only sets you up for failure,” she cautioned. Push beyond what is expected and don’t let people tell you that you can’t accomplish something, which is how she has lived her life. Having been told that she cannot advance in a male-dominated profession, she became the youngest vice president in an energy company in Canada.

Be grateful and give back is her next tool. “You are never too busy to volunteer, to return to those who have supported you,” Drysdale says. She related the tale of receiving a volunteer of the year award while she was a full-time engineering student, working part time and eight-months pregnant. “There is always time to give back.”

Her final tool in her life’s tool box is to make your life count. “You will never run out of exciting things to do. Don’t just do for yourself, do for others as well. Be the voice for those who do not have one. Explore the world and don’t let fear stop you,” she counseled.

In the question and answer period following her talk, Drysdale spoke to the audience about the importance of continued learning, of finding a mentor to guide one through career steps, networking and developing those networks through volunteering, and tempering one’s enthusiasm with respect for corporate culture.

From left are President Richard Levao, Vaughn McCoy, president, PSEG Foundation; Diana Drysdale, VP, Renewables, PSEG Energy Holdings and Bloomfield College trustee; honors student Babasola Ojutalayo, Dr. Marion Terenzio, VP for academic affairs; honors student Jacqueline Rojas, and Dr. Carolyn Spies, associate dean for faculty and program development. PSEG Foundation recently gifted the college with $25,000 for an endowed scholarship.
Maureen C. Grant has served Bloomfield College well in many roles. As an administrator, benefactor, volunteer, and trustee, she has advanced the mission of the College in all that she does.

Maureen holds a B.A. in English and Philosophy from Marymount Manhattan College, an M.A. in English Literature from St. John’s University, and a Ph.D. in Nineteenth Century Studies from Drew University. From 1989-1997, Dr. Grant was Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of Faculty at Bloomfield College. She has a long collegiate career having lent her expertise to the College of St. Elizabeth as the assistant dean of academic affairs; Felician College as academic dean, associate academic dean, director of arts and science and associate professor of English; and at Marymount Manhattan College as senior vice president and acting president.

Dr. Grant participated in the Visiting Scholar Program at Wolfson College of Cambridge University in Cambridge, England, during the fall of 1995 and the spring of 2005. She also was appointed Visiting Scholar with the Faculty of History of Cambridge University.

During Bloomfield College’s 124th Commencement, Dr. John Noonan awarded Maureen the President’s Medal for her exemplary leadership as an administrator. In honor of her service, many of her friends from the Christian Community at the Shrine of St. Joseph, an organization of which she is a founding member, established an endowed scholarship in her name. This is one of the many gifts that Maureen and her late husband Patrick were instrumental in giving to the College. Prior to his passing in 2009, Patrick Grant was president, CEO and board chair of Investors Savings Bank and president of the Independent College Fund of New Jersey. Both Maureen and Patrick have been generous supporters of Bloomfield College for many years.

Maureen has been an active member of the Bloomfield College Board of Trustees and currently chairs the Student Affairs Committee and sits on the Academic Affairs Committee, Compensation Committee, Executive Committee, and the Committee on the Institute for Technology and Professional Studies.

Ernest M. “Ernie” Kosa graduated from Bloomfield College and Seminary in 1945. After graduating from seminary, he took a position in Cleveland, Ohio, as an assistant pastor in a Hungarian Presbyterian Church. After getting the requisite experience, he joined the Chaplaincy of the United States Army in 1952 and served in Korea, Vietnam, Europe, and several stations in the United States. He was awarded the Bronze Star for “distinguishing himself by meritorious service in connection with military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Viet Nam as Chaplain at the 3rd Surgical Hospital.” In less than a year, Ernie held 115 worship services, made 2,000 hospital ward visits and 18,000 patient visits and was available day or night to help casualties when they were brought into the emergency room. His service was considered invaluable.
Frantz Jean-Charles is widely regarded as one of the premier offensive players in the history of the men’s soccer program at Bloomfield College.

Originally from Gonaives, Haiti, the forward began his rise to national prominence in 1988 while playing for Club Sportif Saint-Louis. During his three-year stint for the club, Frantz was a two-time league scoring champion and National Player of the Year selection, earning him a three-year stint on the Haitian National Team from 1988-1991.

From there, Frantz moved on to the United States, enrolling at Essex County Community College in New Jersey. His two-year tenure as a member of ECCC saw the sharpshooter tally 49 goals and 35 assists, leading Essex to the Region XIX title in 1992. Frantz was named Region XIX Player of the Year, scoring nine goals and dishing out three assists in the regional tournament.

His career at Essex over, Frantz joined the team at Bloomfield College and immediately became one of the most lethal scorers in the NAIA. Over his two year-career as a member of the Deacons, Frantz netted an astounding 73 goals, and assisted on 54 tallies. His 104 total points during the 1995 season set the mark for the most points in a single-season in the state of New Jersey, and earned him a second team NAIA All-American selection. His four-year collegiate career saw Frantz score 120 goals, and register 89 assists.

A standout in the classroom as well as on the pitch, Frantz graduated magna cum laude from Bloomfield with a degree in Business Administration/Management. Currently residing in South Orange, New Jersey, Frantz works as a Human Resources Representative at Federal Express. He lives with his wife of 15 years, Nancy, and their two children Maritza, 14, and register 89 assists.

After his military service, Ernie and his wife Barbara moved their three children to Sparta, NJ. While he searched for a pastor position in a Presbyterian church, he helped out in different area congregations and held services at Picatinny Arsenal (a U.S. Army research facility). He became the Sussex County Mental Health Alcohol and Drug Administrator, a position that he held for 20 years. During this time he also served two churches as an interim pastor. He has been credited with organizing the Council of Services Agencies, headed the Emergency Management, and remains on the Hospice Committee, Veterans’ Committees, 9/11 Committee, RVSP (Retire Senior Volunteer Program), Newton Memorial Hospital Foundation and the Sussex County Farm and Horse Show Display Building. Ernie is a member of the Sussex County Veterans Committee and has diligently worked on planning each year’s Salute to Military Veterans and delivering the Invocation during the ceremonies.

Ernie remained close to his roots, Bloomfield College, and has been an active member of the BCAA Council for seven years. He lends his talents to BCAA events and is a valuable donor to the Bloomfield College Fund.

Bloomfield College is proud to induct the Reverend Ernest M. Kosa into the Alumni Hall of Honor in 2011.
Bloomfield College hosted the Donor Recognition Dinner on October 27, 2010 at Mayfair Farms to bring together scholarship recipients and their generous benefactors. President Richard Levao opened the formal portion of the evening by thanking the donors for their generosity and commitment to the value of higher education. Bloomfield College Board of Trustees Chair Martin McKerrow also thanked the audience for believing in the mission of the college and making a difference to generations of students. Shavon Ford ’07 introduced the two student speakers, Jacqueline Rojas ’11 and Anthony Addone ’11. In his address he noted that through scholarships, students can concentrate on becoming scholars and not worry about how to pay the bills.

Jacqueline Rojas ’11 is a Joel M. Weiner ’66 Honors Program Scholarship recipient and a scholar in both the Honors Program and the McNair program. She is applying for a Fulbright scholarship and is working towards a J.D./Ph.D. in international relations. “To all who have supported me, you have made a huge difference in my life,” she said as she thanked her benefactor.

Anthony Addone ’11 is a scholar athlete and the recipient of the Bestfoods Educational Foundation Scholarship and the Donald A. Ross ’52 Athletic Scholarship. He says that he learned to dream big with the support of the faculty, staff and his benefactors. “You have changed my life and for that I am extremely grateful,” he concluded.
Former trustee and scholarship donor Archie Palmer enjoys a lively discussion with several students.

Representatives from Investors Savings Bank with their scholarship recipient Jin Hwa Balise.

Trustee Emeritus L. Donald LaTorre and Professor Maryann Di Liberto enjoy the evening.

Trustees Diana Drysdale and John Campbell with former Bestfoods Educational Foundation Scholarship recipients Erika Ramirez ’10 and Maureen Hyppolite ’09.

Dr. Thomas M. Wilfrid, executive director of the Charlotte W. Newcombe Foundation and the Newcombe Mature Women scholars.

Trustee Joel Weiner ’66 with his scholarship recipients and Honors program scholars Jacqueline Rojas, Carrie Herman, and Alysa Ortiz.

Vincent Rospond congratulates Anthony Addone, the student speaker, scholarship recipient, and athlete.
Message from the BCAA

Dear Alumni and Friends,

Growing up I always had the notion that the words “house” and “home” were one in the same. However, my belief was tested one day and has forever changed my perception. A high school teacher once said to me that “a house is a place in which you live and a home is the experiences that are tied to a house.” At that moment I made that my mantra; to create experiences that are memorable and ever-lasting. And Bloomfield College is the second house that has become my home. The exact place that has turned me from an ambitious teenager into a professional woman. From freaking out about finals at 3 a.m. in the Student Center to watching the dedicated people who pledge rejoice as they cross into their respective fraternities and sororities on the quad, the laughter and tears that fill every corner of this campus will live with me forever. Now that I have experienced the realities of the world that revolves around us, I have found comfort in knowing that I always have a home to come to whenever the world gets me down.

On the beautiful day of May 28, 2009, by far the best graduating class in my opinion left the College for a bigger world. I could not help but feel saddened at the fact that come the next September I was no longer a part of the daily college routine. Nonetheless, I was determined to find my niche in life after college. Then one day I came across the Bloomfield College Alumni Association and it was like the cup of cocoa after playing in the snow that I needed. I met people who wanted to recapture the essence of college while being trailblazers in the world. I discovered that the benefits of Bloomfield College do not end at graduation, but can become a part of your life as a member of the Alumni Association. For those of us who graduated in the new millennium, we can offer a new perspective on familiar themes – sharing our successes and experiences and lending a helping hand to current and future students. As a council member, I will serve as a bridge for my fellow alumni who want to stay connected. My hope is that this letter reaches you and gives you the path to come back and stay connected to the electrifying home known as Bloomfield College.

Sincerely,

Maureen S. Hyppolite ’09
Bloomfield College Alumni Association Council Member

5. Ed Andrew ’70, Kwi Brennan, vice president for institutional advancement, and Paul Bowlby ’75 enjoy a moment in the alumni section of the tent during Deacon’s Fest. The event hosted an alumni homecoming, an admission open house and a parents’ day with hundreds of people visiting or returning to the campus.

6. Trustee Joel Weiner ’66 welcomes fellow alum and new trustee Carolyn Glynn ’69 to Deacon’s Fest.

7. Former staff member Neville Gittens was welcomed to Deacon’s Fest by Richard Levao, president of Bloomfield College. It was a beautiful day and the place was packed!

8. Student Natasha Crawford checks in Robert Cooney ’07 and Kimberly Civinski ’08 to the Deacon’s Fest activities. BC sweethearts, Robert and Kimberly will be married in early 2011.

9. Bloomfield Township Mayor Ray McCarthy addresses the alumni during a session about Bloomfield College and its advances. President Richard Levao introduced the mayor and council member Bernard Hamilton (not pictured). Both township officials expressed their delight at having the college in the township and pledged to continue to strengthen the relationship.

10. Mary Fierro ’86 and Terry Fierro ’86 enjoy light snacks at the reception at the Bloomfield Steak and Seafood House.

11. The Lady Deacons’ soccer match against Georgian Court was a hard fought game. The Deacons fell 2-0 in the end.
1952 – 1972

Bill Aring ’52, David Bucci ’59, Robert Toro ’72, and Robert Walter ’60 have generously given gifts in memory of their recently deceased friend George Belford ’60. The gifts are directed to the Bloomfield College Scholarship.

1964

James Sawyer celebrated his 68th birthday with his sister and brother-in-law, Mary Sawyer Picken and John Picken, and his brother, John Sawyer, who travelled to Millersburg, OH, to take him to lunch. Jim lives Scenic Point, a nursing home and rehab center and was given a birthday party with cake and ice cream with his fellow residents. He followed the rescue operation of the Chilean miners closely and celebrated their safe return.

1961

Bill Anderson (Rev. Dr.) sent a copy of his newest book to the Office of Institutional Advancement to be donated to the Library. A Journey Through Christian Theology, second edition, was published this year by Fortress Press. His personalized inscription says, “To the Bloomfield College Library, with fond memories of a valued education.”

1973

Darel-Ann Kirshner-DePompeo was honored by her employer of three-plus decades when she was named Nurse of the Year 2010 by the Valley Hospital in Ridgewood, NJ. Darel-Ann has been an ER nurse for her entire career in a hospital that takes up to 70,000 patients per year in the ER alone. “This was a complete surprise,” she says. She was nominated because of her work and her involvement in several committees over the years. In addition to her BSN, Darel-Ann is a CPR instructor, one of the original MICNs riding with the paramedics, is certified in ED and Critical Care and served on the computer review committee as well as the Code Blue committee and infection prevention devices. She is active in the Northern NJ chapter of AACN and the Emergency Nurses Association. She acts as a substitute school nurse and is the back up for the public health nurse. Darel-Ann and her husband Mike have three sons, Michael, Matthew, and Mark. When she is not working as a nurse, she is a groupie and medical staff member for the Ridgewood Concert Band in which Mike plays the baritone sax. She has travelled to Asia, Europe, and South America with the band.

Nurses Alumni celebrate the Class of 1960

This year’s celebration of the 50th anniversary of graduation – the Class of 1960 – had a humorous turn. Betty Wilson Martin N’60 delivered an address reminiscent of nursing in the past. In her greeting, she remarked that she likes to be in a room full of nurses because “we can talk about gross stuff!” Fondly remembering her education in the 1950s, she noted that nursing has come a long way, but one thing remains the same. “We touched many lives, and many lives touched ours,” she concluded. With that, the class of 1960 regaled the audience with a parody sung to “My Favorite Things.” The lyrics are:

Maalox and nose drops and needles for knitting,
Walkers and handrails and new dental fittings,
Bundles of magazines tied up in string,
These are a few of my favorite things.

Cadillacs and cataracts and hearing aids and glasses,
Polident and Fixodent and false teeth in glasses,
Pacemakers, golf carts, and porches with swings,
These are a few of my favorite things.

When the pipes leak, when the bones creak,
when the knees go bad,
I simply remember my favorite things –
and then I don’t feel so bad.

Hot tea and crumpets and corn pads for bunions,
No spicy hot food or food cooked with onions,
Bathrobes and heat pads and hot meals they bring,
These are a few of my favorite things.

When the joints ache, when the hips break,
When the eyes grow dim,
Then I remember the great life I’ve had and then
I don’t feel so bad!
Albert Pecora was named superintendent of schools for the Wallington School District.

Pecora graduated from Bloomfield College with a degree in mathematics in 1973. Following his graduation he landed a teaching job in Clifton where he taught math for 10 years. In 1983, Pecora stepped out of the educational sphere gaining employment with Pearl Vision, working for that company for 10 years. In 1993, Pecora rejoined the educational system at Passaic County Tech, a vocational high school in Wayne. In his time spent at Passaic County Teach, Pecora was the Director of Technology, Director of Technology and Curriculum and was the assistant superintendent.

Pecora earned a masters degree from Montclair State in education administration and is currently enrolled at Seton Hall for his doctorate in education administration. With a focus on student achievement, Pecora says “It's the major goal for all educators. I am charged with looking at the curriculum, deciding what we can and should use and putting every application/resource we have toward bettering our students' education. The students learning will be my number one concern as long as I am superintendent.”

Paul Bowlby ’75 (Rho Sigma Delta) and Ruth Harrison Bowlby ’73 (Sigma Theta Chi) of Pompton Lakes, NJ, are thrilled to announce the arrival of their granddaughter Alyssa Victoria Rose, born to their daughter Amy Rose and her husband Bill, of Fairlawn, NJ on September 1, 2010. She joins her big brother Jayden!

1991

Rose Mitchell, associate dean of students at the college, was minding her own business while in Montclair on a Sunday morning when she came upon three teenage boys bullying an elderly woman. Rose stepped in and told the boys to leave the lady alone, then reported the incident to the police. Unbeknownst to her, she was being filmed for the “What would you do?” series on the ABC Channel 7 with John Quiñones. Always pluging for Bloomfield College, she was filmed while wearing a BC sweatshirt!

2002

Patrick Fox wrote with some good news. “I entered the 2010 Senior Citizen Juried Art Show that was held at Essex County Hospital in Cedar Grove, NJ on August 18th. I won first place for non-professional computer graphics.”

2003

Kellei Cosby premiered her film that she wrote, directed and produced. The piece is titled Unexpected and it was shown at the Van Fossan Theatre at Westminster Arts Center on November 11, 2010. The story is of unrequited love and was shot in New York, New Jersey, and Maine. Kellei founded Imagine It Productions, LLC, in 2010.

2007

Constantina “Dina” Meis just finished a stint as the campaign manager for Bryan Allen (D-PA) in the November 2010 midterm elections. While her candidate lost to the 16-year incumbent, she says she learned a great deal and had some wonderful opportunities. “This was my first time managing an entire race, which was a great experience,” she says. She discovered new passions for fundraising and management as well as learning the intricacies of the issues of the campaign. She is now taking a break to spend time with her family and is looking for her next opportunity. She is considering law school and/or a master’s in public policy.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) New Jersey Nursing Initiative has announced the members of the second and final cohort of the RWJF New Jersey Nursing Scholars. Karen Hoary, who will be working towards her master’s degree in nursing at Monmouth University, is among the scholars. The nursing scholars will participate in the NJNI Faculty Preparation Program and receive a scholarship covering tuition, a stipend to cover living expenses for up to four years, and a laptop computer.

Maximize the value of your gift through your company’s matching gift program

Many companies sponsor matching gift programs for their employees’ philanthropic interests. These companies double, and sometimes triple, the value of charitable gifts made by employees and/or their spouses.

The process is quite simple. Ask the human resources department if your company offers the matching gift benefit. If so, they will have the matching gift documents. Return the completed document to the human resources department, the company will match your gift once you have made it. It is that easy. You can also check with a spouse or partner’s company – they will often match a gift as well.

Not sure if your company offers this benefit? Log onto www.bccommunity.org and click on the Supporting Bloomfield College tab. Click on Matching Gifts in the left column. This will take you to a page that will allow you to search for your company’s name.

Of course, if you have any questions, we are here to help. Contact the Office of Institutional Advancement at 973-748-9000 x293 or email us at advancement@bloomfield.edu

Nicole Franklin, adjunct instructor of broadcast journalism, was selected to be on a panel about Women in Entertainment: Behind the Scenes at The Apollo Theatre on March 22, 2010. The audience heard from talented women working in New York City’s entertainment industry. Presented by the Mayor’s Office of Film, Theatre and Broadcasting, the Apollo Theater’s education program, and New York Women in Film and Television, provided the audience with personal accounts of five women’s experiences behind the scenes in film, television and theatre. Franklin, who’s worked as an editor, producer, filmmaker and director, recently took on the challenge of being a fill-in stage manager on “The Today Show.” “It’s four hours of live TV,” she said. “You meet heads of state and Britney Spears.

Neddie Serra RN, Ed.D., chair of the Frances M. McLaughlin Division of Nursing was honored by the National Association of Hispanic Nurses – NJ Chapter at a dinner in October 2010. The award is the Professional Nurses Achievement Award and the citation said: For your extraordinary service and dedication to the nursing profession.

Laura Nova, assistant professor in the CAT department, opened the CAT Chow series with a slide presentation of her artwork with a talk about how her art evolved from simple pieces to works involving interaction and technology. In the summer of 2010, she had a show at Real Art Ways in Hartford, CT, titled Limited Run. Inspired by the Laura’s endurance training using the recreational paths and racecourses of New York City, Limited Run enacts an indoor track constructed within the confines of the gallery walls. Visitors are encouraged to run or walk around the looped spectacle. A fire bell rings at each completed 20-meter lap. During the first two weeks of June, Laura organized racecourse activities with community groups as well as used the track for her own running regimen.

Bloomfield College was awarded a three-year grant from the National Science Foundation. Professor Keith Guzik submitted the proposal titled Registering Security: Investigating the Operation of and Reaction to the Public Vehicle Registry in Mexico.

Leslie Doyle, a specialist in the SSS-STAR program, has a short story published in the Fall/Winter issue of Front Porch literary journal. The story is titled “Backyard Astronomer.” It is the story of a woman who coping with a frightening neurological mystery, as well as other problems in her life — unemployment, a bad cold, and uncertainty about what lengths her husband might go to in order to help her get well. She begins to gain clarity while looking up at the night sky, and the sight of an unusually configured comet.

Anthony Salandy, Ph.D. director of the McNair Scholars program, was personally asked by Marian Wright Edelman (President and Founder of the Children’s Defense Fund – CDF) to join her and a select group of educators and policymakers to discuss effective ways to increase the number of disadvantaged students enrolled in higher education. The meeting was held Tuesday, December 14 to Thursday, December 16, 2010 at the CDF-Alex Haley Farm in Clinton, Tennessee.

Rachel Eliza Griffiths, lecturer in English, creative writing and poetry, has published Miracle Arrhythmia, a collection of her original poetry. The event was celebrated with readings by her current and former students and fellow poet and humanities division chair, Paul Genega, at an afternoon gathering in her honor. Griffiths is a Cave Canem Fellow, a recipient of numerous fellowships, a 2007 Pushcart Nominee, and cover artist for multiple published works.
There are exciting things happening at the Westminster Arts Center and if you’ve been missing them — you’ve missed out on some wonderful live performances! For the past four years, more and more metropolitan groups are calling our very own arts center home as they present everything from theatre to music to dance. Our humanities students have attended and written reports about the Shakespeare shows they have witnessed come alive in front of their eyes. Local school children have filled the theatre to be entertained by the Garden State Band and the Yates Family Theatre’s retelling of classical children’s stories. And even groups from retirement villages have been bused to our campus so they can enjoy the wonderful performances by our theater in residence, 4th Wall Theatre. But don’t worry; you can still witness plenty of events through the end of June. Just visit the website to see a listing of great, live entertainment as BCWAC continues to express various elements of the arts at a very low price. See you at the arts center!

In Focus

Name: Tavainya Smith, McNair Scholar

Major: Game Programming/Development, Class of 2011

Scholarships: Applying for a SMART (Science, mathematics, and research for transformation) scholarship through the U.S. Department of Defense for graduate studies. This scholarship requires me to work for the DOD for two years after finishing my Ph.D.

On being a McNair Scholar: This is the best thing that has happened to me. The McNair program has opened many opportunities for me and has given me a “can-do” attitude.

About her research: I spent eight weeks at Clemson University programming The Collaborative Physics Sketchbook application for a touch table that was built by the graduate students. We decided to develop an application to teach eighth-grade physics through interactive learning and multi-touch technology. My job was to study the lesson plans and create an application that made use of the lesson plans and utilized multi-touch technology. The focus group of seventh graders loved it!

Goals: I will attend graduate school to earn my Ph.D. in human-centered computing. Eventually I would like to work in the private sector creating learning technologies. I would also like to teach at the college level.

About Bloomfield College: I got a good fundamental knowledge here, not only in programming, but also in my minor – creative writing. I love writing and plan to blend both my programming and creative writing skills in graduate school to develop interactive applications.
